Brice represents companies in high-stakes commercial litigation in federal and state courts in a wide range of business disputes. Brice's practice also includes representing individuals in investigations by the Department of Justice, U.S. attorney's offices, the Securities and Exchange Commission, and the Commodity Futures Trading Commission into allegations of securities fraud, mail fraud, money laundering, and violations of the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act.

Clients value Brice's quick thinking and attention to detail. He works on high-stakes commercial disputes, bringing to bear significant experience in a wide range of legal topics and stages of civil litigation, including supervising document discovery, witness preparation, and motion practice. Brice has drafted complaints and numerous motions, including motions to quash subpoenas in the Southern District of New York and other federal district courts, successful motions to dismiss cases in the New York Supreme Court Commercial Division, and a motion for a preliminary injunction.

In addition to commercial litigation, Brice's practice focuses on white-collar criminal and civil regulatory actions, where he has engaged in document discovery, conducted extensive fact interviews, and prepared for and participated in numerous presentations to federal prosecutors on the client's behalf. By exhaustively researching legal issues and developing the facts of complex business and financial cases, Brice effectively prepares individual clients for depositions and interviews with regulators and federal prosecutors. He also represents attorneys and law firms in matters before the New York Attorney Grievance Committee.

Prior to joining LSW, Brice served as a judicial law clerk at the federal trial level for the Honorable P. Kevin Castel in New York City.
